Mr. Seward's dispatch to the Provisional Governor of Florida proves the truth of several recent statements respecting the position of the President on the reconstruction question. He has frequently said that those persons who have represented him as urging the immediate recognition of the Scathern State governments or the admission of all the claimants to Congres were talking wildly and without truth. He on the contrary expects Congress to steadily refuse admission to men coming from States that have not repudiated the rebel debt, agreed to the Constitutional Amend-ment, and given proper guarantees for the protection of the colored inhabitants of the

The following account of his

The singer respects the delicacy of the Edinburgh ear. Coarse London may roar with applianse; fastidious Edinburgh snuffs dislain, and sneers reputations away, London is the stohiach of the empire—Edinburgh the quick, subtle, far-darting brain. Some pretension of this kind the visitor hears on all sides of him.

"It is quite wonderful how Edinburgh purrs over her own literary achievements, Swift, in the dark years that preceded his death, looking one day over the productions of his prime, exclaimed, "Good heaven! what a genius I once was." Edinburgh looking some fifty years back on large, looking some large, looking so Just received at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. His lunches and cliquot wine at the Everett House were pronounced superb, and those who attended the other stars that of yere made the welkin bright.

On every side we hear of the brilliant society of forty years ago. Edinburgh considers herself supreme in talent—just as it is taken for granted to-day that the present English navy is the most powerful in the world, because Nelson was affaid the Prussian government would demand his extradition to answer for the thought they could not so recall him if he thought be must be a prince, inasmuch as he lived in a princely style. The tories would agree with them onlist in the service, which he did, and wa attached as a corporal, and subsequently may be said that Burns, Scott, and Carlyle are the only men really great in literature—taking great in a Eu opean sense—who, during the last eighty years have been connected with Edinburgh. I do not include Wilson in the list, for although he was as splendld as any of these for the moment, he was evanescent.

"Scott lived in or near Edinburgh during nearly the whole course of his life. Burns lived there but a few months. Carlyle want to London early, where he has written his important works, and made his reputation. Let the city boast of Scotthac one will say she does wrong in that but it is not so easy to discover the remarkable brilliancy of her other literary lights. Their reputations, after all, are to a great extent local. What blazes a san at Edinburgh—would, if transported to London, not unfrequently become a farthing candle.

"Lord Jeffrey—when shall we cease to been his praises?" With perfect truthfuluess one may admit that his lordship was no common man. His "vision" was sharp and clear enough within its range.
